The Test of Female Heroism.

In the solemn hour of our country's danger, it is [illegible] [illegible] the gentler sex which has to make her [illegible] citizen's [illegible] shows his [illegible] by taking up arms [illegible] but the women have a high and noble duty to perform in stimulating and sanctifying, as it were, for the performance of that duty. The test of patriotism which severs husband from wife and son from mother is, we know, a severe one; but where is the woman, who, at a time when the liberty which has elevated her to the highest place of respect, and the bulwark of the law which has protected her person from every violence, are alike threatened, by a worse than foreign enemy, thundering at the very portals of our home, would hesitate to bid husband or father, son or brother, go forth to battle with her blessing and armed for the contest with her approving and encouraging smile? To the young wife, we would say better far is a widowhood of honor than a life long union with a craven who would not defend his home, glorious the solemn garb which denotes your bereavement when you can pay visits to the grave of your dead warrior husband, and over it mingle your tears in common with those of the mourning friends of our country. Now, women of America, is the time for lofty patriotism and generous self-abnegation; now is the trying season for you to exhibit that sublime fortitude for which you have been distinguished in all the past. Give up your jewels to your country and give them with the holy balm of your blessing. Wives and mothers of Kentucky, violence is threatening you; rapine hovers darkly in the distance, and all the horrors of a civil war are impending over you. To save your lives, and dearer far, your honors, it is necessary your husbands and sons should arm and go out to meet the foe. Cheer them in this trying hour; let no unnecessary pang be added to the partings which the stern realities of the times demands. Garland your loved ones with your farewell kisses; throw the shield of your prayer around them; nerve their arms when they give you their last embrace by saying to them, "Go where duty calls and God be with you!" and trust to the Almighty Ruler of the universe to restore them safely when white robed peace again spreads her angel wings over the land. As the Knight of old received his spurs from his lady love, and wore her colors in his helmet, swearing to carry them in the thickest of the foe, so, in these happier days of Christianizing influences, let the mother's blessing be invoked upon his head and the wife's animating kiss nerve his heart for deeds of noblest daring, and, by God's blessing, conquer he must, for our cause it is just. In the name of Heaven let no wife's tears unnerve the soldier's arm and no mother's alarms spread panic to the bosom of her warrior boy. Bid them go and God speed! Bid them remember their homes, and strike the foe boldly but mercifully, in the remembrance that they too have perhaps loved ones in some distant place, awaiting their return. Let them fight this war as christian soldiers, 'still as the breeze' when mercy pleads, but "dreadful as the storm" when their avenging blows fall like hail upon the foe. Mothers and wives, in the holy sanctity of your homes, let your prayers ascend to the throne above for the protection of your loved and now absent ones; but when the hour of parting comes remember the noble woman who ran her arm within the bolt of the door, to serve as a bar to aid the escape of her husband, and though the pressure be hard and agonizing, be it in the spirit of martyrs, and, if a tear should dim the eye, let it be illumined by a smile of hope.

SCOTCH HAPPINESS.—Some people have singular ideas of the perfection of worldly happiness. A Scotchman who has resided in the State for nearly thirty years, and who had accumulated a very handsome property, recently sent for his father, with the view that the old gentleman should share his prosperity, and slip away from his long lease of life as smoothly as possible. One day a short time ago a friend of the family paid a visit to the mansion where the old gentleman was living with his son, and took occasion to compliment the proprietor on the loveliness of his home—a Heaven on earth. "Heaven on earth!" growled the old man—"Heaven on earth! and no' a thimble-fu' o' whiskey i' the hail hoose!"—Boston Jour.

BREADSTUFFS AND OTHER TRADE.—The New York World, Oct. 1st, says:—"The largest business probably ever done in breadstuffs in this market was done yesterday, namely, 15,000 barrels of flour, 300,000 bushels of wheat, 310,000 bushels of corn, valued at about three quarters of a million of dollars. Six vessels were chartered to be laden with breadstuffs for England and France. [illegible] shipments by vessels in the [illegible]—At [illegible] in the afternoon [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] excitement."

Emigration from the East.

We received some weeks since the following letter. We thought we would take our own time to answer it; and we apprehend that now is as good a time as we shall have.

, Ill., Sept. 1, 1861.

"Dear Friend—You probably understand the condition of things in the country here. Bad crops and bad seasons, years past, have sadly reduced the prospects of the poorer class of farmers. Many that you know, and who were supposed to be well off, are now poor and the chances of their again getting up here are doubtful. They might raise enough to secure themselves a good outfit for the plains and some stock after their arrival in Oregon. Give them a chance for a new start in business and I believe they would succeed well. Shall they go to Oregon?

We have heard a good deal of your discoveries of gold mines, but we do not know what to think of them.

I write this at the request of and . Answer me at your earliest convenience."

We can very well suppose that there is a disposition among certain classes of people in Illinois, to emigrate to this coast, irrespective of hard times brought about by bad crops.—The war must make many men look to this coast as a place of quiet and where they can in other respects better their condition. We want population in Oregon to develope her resources. Of the fertile lands of this valley not one fourth are cultivated. Land can be had here cheap, and emigrants can at once enjoy the advantages of society, schools, churches, roads, mills, &c. One great disadvantage we labor under is that our country is sparsely settled—the people are scattered—we want population to fill up the waste places.

The business of Oregon is undergoing great changes. In California, a considerable portion of the population, abandoning unprofitable mining, have gone into the farming business. Crops there have been great, and these have reduced the value of farm produce here. But the discovery of rich, extensive and easily worked gold mines on our eastern frontiers, is inducing great emigration to the mines, not only from our valley but largely from California, and as these mines must be to a great extent fed from this valley, we are sure that farm produce will be high here and farming profitable.

There is but little country east of the Cascade mountains fit for general agricultural purposes;—none, we suppose, that would satisfy farmers, who have lived on the rich prairie lands of Illinois. Yet when emigrants from the east reach the country east of the mountains they will be told a thousand stories in regard to the agricultural advantages east of the mountains and as many to the disadvantage of this valley. It will ever remain an eternal truth that the Willamette valley is the great agricultural country of Oregon.

You say you "have heard a good deal of the gold discoveries in Oregon." Gold stories generally increase the farther they go from the mines; but in this case we think we can pledge our reputation that the publications in regard to the gold discoveries in Eastern Oregon and Washington, have not exceeded the truth. The discoveries there are wonderful—many men have gathered their thousand dollars of gold a day—others less in amount down to one hundred. Miners will not work claims that yield twenty-five dollars a day!—Even in winter discoveries are made of new mines; and in the inclemency of the present season, men are now pushing from this valley for the mines in the vallies of Salmon river, Powder river, John Day's river, and new localities on the [illegible] Water and other places. We state [illegible] say—that [illegible] of these mines—[illegible] excitement—and this excitement is extending through all the gold diggings of California.

We do not recommend emigrant families from the East to go to these mines. We say to them come to this valley.—The gold of the mines will find your pockets for the produce of your farms here—your bacon, lard, butter, flour, beans, dried fruits, &c., &c. Miners must eat—and from the great population of this valley they must be fed.

Last season over 10,000 emigrants from the Western States came overland to California. We do not suppose that this will be the case the coming year.—California does not offer at this time such advantages to emigrants as Oregon.—The coming year Oregon will receive large mining emigrations from California.

The emigrants over the plains last season met with no difficulties. They need not meet with any if they are properly furnished at the start and act prudently on the plains. We trust government will extend protection as last year. It gives confidence and increases the number of emigrants. Still with companies well organized, there need be no difficulties in accomplishing the journey.

We have now answered our friend's letter, and the answer will apply to many letters which are constantly coming to Oregon from the States. If men break up in the East and come here to better their condition and that of their families,—they can only do it by a constant course of industry.—Men and women have to work here as much as in any other part of the world;—but labor pays here, whether you labor for yourself or others.

Note.—By obtaining a good map of Oregon and Washington the emigrant will find that on the route here they will pass very near some of the richest gold diggings.

From Victoria and the Sound.

We have Victoria dates as late as the 4th December.

The ship Carrier Dove, on the 17th Oct., in lat. 11° 17' North, long. 117° 26' West, took from the Chili bark Col. Pecarte, bound from Puget Sound to Valparaiso, loaded with lumber, the Captain and crew—the bark being in a sinking condition.

Fifty-five colored and one white foreigner, took the naturalization oath before a Magistrate at Victoria the 21st November.

The vessels Narramisee, J. B. Lunt, and Huntsville, have arrived at Victoria. They had experienced severe weather, which carried some of their sails away. The Lunt brought $42,000 worth of goods from San Francisco.

The Meg Merrilies had arrived at Victoria, from Alberni, with 25,000 feet of white pine lumber.

The Colonist of the 20th says:—

Union Fund.—The sum of $1000, the voluntary contributions of loyal American citizens resident in this city, for the Union cause, was forwarded to the Rev. Starr King, at San Francisco, by the last steamer, with the request that that gentleman would remit it to the East.

Sloop Ashore.—The sloop Hamly, (formerly the W. T. Sherman,) is reported ashore at Discovery Island, whither she was driven by the gale on Tuesday night. The Hamly has a cargo of brick aboard for the Victoria Gas Company, which will probably be sacrificed to save the vessel. The schooner Trader is also reported ashore on San Juan Island.

A race between Lady Franklin and Black John came off at Victoria on the first, for $2,000. When about half round, Lady Franklin fell, and of course the race was won by Black John.

The Port Townsend paper says that the Revenue Cutter Joe Lane is to take the place of the Jeff. Davis on the Sound—the latter vessel being rotten and likely to secede. The same paper expressed the hope that the steamer Shubrick will be sent to the Sound.

New Road to the Salmon River.—We have very good authority for stating that a route for a road to the Salmon River mines, through the Grande Ronde, has been found, which reduces the travelled distance between Portland and the Salmon river mines some one hundred and thirty miles. It starts from the Dalles and goes by the way of the Grande Ronde. Most of it is on an old Indian trail.

New Diggings.—New and rich gold diggings have been found thirty miles south of the old diggings on Salmon river; and [illegible] miners have gone to them. Oro Fino and Pierce City are nearly deserted.

The [illegible] gives the [illegible] and that it is [illegible]

[illegible]

Commodore Wilkes.—Commodore Charles Wilkes, who recently assumed the responsibility of taking from a British mail steamer in Bermuda bay, the traitors, Slidell and Mason, and bringing them as captives to Fortress Monroe, is the Captain Wilkes who, in the years 1838-39 and '40, had command of the American Exploring Expedition to the South Pacific, [illegible] works in American [illegible]. His capture of the rebel commissioners, Slidell and Mason, will still further [illegible] his name on the history of the United States—the circumstances in which such capture was effected exceeding in [illegible] it brought forward a question of international and belligerent rights which might end in a mighty [illegible] with [illegible] maritime power in the world. Whatever may be the [illegible], it is undeniable that it has already [illegible] the great heart of the people, which beats in sympathy with it, [illegible] indicating that, come weal or woe, [illegible] must not be [illegible] the [illegible] dignity of an [illegible].

Commodore Wilkes is a native of New York, where [illegible] he resides. He is now 63 years of age, though still hale, hearty and as vigorous as many men not half his age. He is [illegible] above the medium height, [illegible]. In manner, as in act, he is every inch a sailor, and never was known to avoid the hardships of the service by virtue of his [illegible] immunity. On the contrary (we speak now of a time when he was a younger man), he always appeared anxious to "rough" it, and on the exploring expedition was often known to sleep on the beach (when an object was in view) with his men, instead of courting the lazy ease of his comfortable cabin. Neither would he permit any "shirking" or the "putting on of airs" by the junior officers. This trait in his character endeared him greatly to the common sailor, but made him less popular with the officers. Had he seen fit to avail himself of the privilege, he could, because of his age, have avoided active service. But he is as true a patriot as thorough sailor; and when the present rebellion broke out he asked for an active command; and the fact that the splendid steam frigate San Jacinto was placed in his charge is an evidence of the estimation in which he is held by the Government.

A letter by last night's mail from Olympia, says that there is a quorum of the two Houses of the Legislature in town. Whether they would go into session was unknown.

…trial of a case in which Wa Ching complained of Yung Kun for threats against his life. Go in, Johns; it makes good times for lawyers.

MELODEONS PICKED UP.—From Mr. Ellis Walker, we learn that persons residing on Sauvie's Island have picked up two melodeons during the week, which will be given up to the rightful owners.

CLEARING AWAY THE DRIFT.—Laborers were all day yesterday engaged in clearing away the drift-wood from the principal wharves and the ferry landing.

REMOVAL.—By reference to his advertisement in to-day's paper, it will be seen that Dr. Weatherford has removed to his new and spacious brick building, on the next block above the old stand, where he is ready to wait on his old friends and customers.

The river is still falling, but slowly, on account of the backwater from the Columbia.

FROST.—A heavy frost fell last night.

The Advertiser has discovered that Lincoln, McClellan, Dickenson, & Co., are traitors and that Jeff. Davis, Beauregard and Twiggs are patriots. Hence it approves of Sark drinking the health of Beauregard and declaring that we have no government.

The three Judges who form the Supreme Court of Washington Territory were at Olympia at the last dates. It was supposed that the Supreme Court would hold their session at that place.

WE HAVE BOURBONS AMONG US.—A Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Press, describing the recent grand review of artillery and cavalry at Washington, by Gen. McClellan, says of the young Bourbons:

The fact that a real Bourbon was at last among us was exemplified in the great anxiety manifested to have a look at the Duc de Chartres and Compte de Paris, who were present, and who, as you know, have lately entered the army. They came on the ground along with Gen. McClellan, the Duke being dressed in light citizen's clothes, and wearing a high silk hat, while the Count wore a plain riding suit, with a blue felt hat, which carelessly shaded his eyes. Apart from that air of the thorough-bred gentleman, which is so universally characteristic of the French, there was nothing peculiar or striking in the appearance of either. You would have passed them twenty times a day without suspecting that they were anything more than gentlemen of taste, … [illegible] and certainly … [illegible] of old Bourbon … [illegible] … of Bourbon …

The Smiths at Auction.—A few days since, Mr "Tom" Bailey was holding forth in his usual happy manner and charming the ladies with the great bargains which he was offering them, and [illegible] men with the manner [illegible] up with [illegible] After [illegible] two pers [illegible] ced bidding [illegible] The bidders could [illegible] mined not [illegible] much higher [illegible] chased of [illegible]

Going? [illegible] tains for [illegible]

"Five," [illegible] the woman

"Half!" yelled the man.

"Six!" screamed the woman [illegible] she got them. She would have bid all day to secure them even if she had [illegible] her husband's estate to pay for them

That day at dinner, Mrs Mary Smith exhibited to her husband the [illegible] accompanied with the remark that some [illegible] bid again me [illegible]

Mr Smith [illegible] from the table with horror [illegible]

"What [illegible] roach in the soup?"

[illegible] you are a fool

"That's what my friends said when I married you," the affectionate wife of his bosom retorted

"Did you bid on them things?" Mr Smith asked

"Yes, I got em, too I meant to have 'em The fool that bid agin me—"

Mr Smith tore his hair out by the handful and threw it into the soup "Mrs Smith," he shouted, "twas me that was bidding agin you I, your husband and you are such a fool as not to know my voice I'll have a divorce if the Supreme Court will give me one Oh, what a fool."

Now a woman won't be called a fool oftener than once a week, even if she is one without resenting it, and consequently Mr. Smith was surprised when a plate of soup was thrown in his face and Mrs Smith was not satisfied when she was laid flat on her back and her husband standing over her kicking her with a keen relish Mr Smith was arrested for the assault, but Mrs Smith said that it was all a mistake, and she was certain her Smithey" didn't mean anything, consequently, Mr Smith was discharged, and the pair went off like turtle doves just mated.
